

INVITATION TO PARTICIPATE THE PLAYING YARDAGE GOLF STUDY

Dear Golfer,

How important is it to know how far you hit every club in your bag?

The PGA Tour Pros will tell you that the number one mistake their ProAm partners make is under-clubbing.

We believe there is more to it than that.

We invite you to participate in a ground-breaking golf study that will help your game and help golfers everywhere. Knowing and hitting to your true playing yardage could be worth 3 to 5 shots per round without changing your swing!

We are conducting a study to evaluate the impact on scoring when golfers hit to their true playing yardage

In the past it has been almost impossible to conduct studies such as this one. But recent advances in technology now provide us with two critical capabilities:

1. The ability to determine true playing yardage with the precision of radar measurement;
2. The ability to electronically track actual playing statistics without interfering with the player's normal game.

We are very excited to combine in this Study the precision of FlightScope radar systems with the hassle free on-course stat-tracking capability of Game Golf. For more information you may visit company websites at www.gamegolf.com and www.Flightscope.com

The Study is open to golfers of all skill levels and is limited to the first 60 players. Study participants will be asked to play 6 rounds of golf in a two-month period wearing the Game Golf tracking system, which will automatically and effortlessly track playing stats. You'll also visit us at the Bridges driving range for one 90-minute radar yardage guide session. The Study begins April 10th (Master's week). That's all there is to it!

To participate in the study, please contact ERIC JONES immediately at
